PICTURE OF LIFE.

WHAT is this Life that morta's idly crave?
The noisy passport of the silent grave,
Each moment sinks the value of the prize,
And death is daily present to our eyes.
Drunk with the joys of life, we heed him not,
Till sickness warns us to the common lot;

Geographical Deſcription of Bachelor's Iſland.

BACHELOR'S iſland is ſituated on the burning ſands of the Deſerts of Folly, where even the ſavage inhabitants of the foreſt ſeldom venture to tread. It is bounded on the Eaſt, by the Regions of Affectation, Vanity and Deceit; on the North; by the Territories of Fear and Cowardice; on the South, by the burning Zone of remorſe, diſeaſe, and death; and, on the Weſt, by the dead lake of oblivion. Hence it is eaſily to be ſuppoſed, that the air of this iſland is ſultry, enervating, and peſtiferous; expoſed to perpetual ſcenes of ſtorm, hurricane, and tempeſt; and its climate, like the minds of its inhabitants, is never ſettled for an hour. The ſpring of Bachelor's iſland totally differs from that of any other I have hitherto read of, as that is here the reaſon of the moſt pernicious heat, and in which the generality of its inhabitants are poſſeſſed with a kind of madneſs the moſt deſtructive to themſelves, the moſt injurious to every civilized country, and the moſt ſubverſive of unguarded innocence. Thoſe, who weather out the ſpring, and live to ſee the ſummer, though they loſe a great degree of their madneſs, yet in that ſeaſon they become artful, hypocritical, and treacherous. Their winter is truly deſpicable indeed, ſince, among all nations upon earth, you cannot expreſs your contempt of a man more pointedly than by calling him an old bachelor—a thing that lives only for itſelf—a thing that has no ſocial harmony in its ſoul—a thing that cares for nobody, and whom nobody regards—a thing tha,

Then what's this life?—A tempo'ary ſtage,
Where divers men, in di'ers parts engage:
The fleeting forms in quick ſucceſſion glide,
As one moves off, his abſence is ſupply'd;
And ſhould ſome favourite actor quit the ſcene,
Into his place another ſteps ſerene——

like a mushroom, delights in bogs and moraſſes, but hates the generous warmth of the noon-day ſun. Though the natives of this miſerable iſland make thoſe of the iſle of matrimony, the conſtant object of their ridicule, yet there have been numberleſs inſtances of their deſerting from their own iſland into that of matrimony, where they have prevailed on ſome good-natured eaſy creatures, to become their nurſes and reſtorers, after their conſtitutions have been nearly ruined in their former miſerable abodes; for, in the iſle of matrimony, though clouds now and then gather over it, yet they ſerve only to render the remainder of the day more brilliant and chearful. In Bachelor's Iſland love is a thing much talked of, but totally unknown to them; and they are hated and deſpiſed, robbed and plundered, by the objects of their miſerable embraces. Cards are the uſual diverſions of the people on the iſland of matrimony, they are conſidered only as an amuſement; but, on Bachelor's Iſland, they are productive of the moſt ſhocking vices, ſuch as the groſſeſt ſcenes of drunkenneſs and debauchery, the total ruin of their private fortunes, and even murder itſelf ſometimes is the conſequence. How many have quitted this iſland, and fled to that ſo much deſpiſed, in order to repair their ruined fortunes, by ſeeking a rich and amiable partner? Bachelor's Iſle is a mere deſert, incapable of producing any thing but nettles, thorns and briers: here are no bleating lambs to pleaſe the eye of innocence; here are no doves to cheriſh their young, nor does the uſeful fawn bound over their barren plains; but wolves, tygers, and crocodiles, are here ſeen in abundance. Here are neither wife nor children to weep over the ashes of the deceased; but owls hoot, ravens croak, and the reptiles of the earth crawl over their graves. In short, of all animals that ever nature produced, an old bachelor must be the most contemptible: he lives a useless being on earth, dies without having answered the end of his creation, in opposition to the mandate of his great maker, and is at last consigned even to oblivion.

A CHURCH MOUSE.

THOSE who are fond of the ludicrous, may perhaps indulge a little risibility from the following incident: On Easter Sunday, while the vicar of a certain Parish church in the vicinity of Chester, in England, was delivering to his congregation an occasional evening lecture, the attention of the audience was diverted from the discourse by the whimsical appearance of a Mouse, (which being the resident of a church, may be supposed was not the fattest of its kind) peeping through a small crevice in the wood of the desk, very near the head of the clerk. The sagacious little animal with hesitative steps, at length ventured out, attracted, as is supposed, by the inviting perfume of Mr Sternhold's wig, a large portion of flour and pomatum having been laid on in honour of the day. Pinching hunger more potent than even love itself, soon forced the poor intruder to the upper works of the clerk's carcase, (at that time half immersed in sleep) by actually seating itself at the top of his wig, where the little thief made a sacrilegious attack on the grease that lay so temptingly

No mark of vegetable life is seen,
No birds repeats his tuneful call,
Save the dark leaves of some rude evergreen,
Save lone red-breast on the mossgrown wall
Yet still there are, who deem all seasons fair,
Who know no idle, restless passions, strife;
Contentment, smiling at each busy care,
Contentment, thankful for the gifts of life.

H. war, at Phil. round it. The smothered titterings of the congregation burstled out into a broad grin, which disturbed both the minister and the Muse; the preaching and nibbling ceased at the same moment; when the Vicar perceiving the cause of the laugh, called to the clerk to put his hand upon the top of his wig! adding, in a stronger cadence "has the fellow no feeling?" Somnus had however arrested his senses; which his nasal organs loudly betrayed. Here the Vicar, as slackening the reigns of temper, called out, "Robert! Robert! I wish I had you by the ear!" when the clerk (awakening rather mal-apropos) added 'amen' to it!—At which a renewed laugh, drove away completely Morpheus and the Mouse; and the muscles of the good people being so intolerably deranged, it was some time before they were restored to their natural church going state of gravity.

Original ANECDOTE.

DURING the last Spanish war but one with England, a ship belonging to the Spaniards was taken on her passage the Caraccas, in South America, by an American Privateer, and brought into New-York. In this ship were a number of large boxes, containing certain printed papers, well known in the Catholic countries, and in Spain commonly distinguished by the name of Spanish Bulls. These, as being a great curiosity in this country, were brought up by Garret Noel, at that time a Bookseller in that city, and advertised in the papers by the title of "Spanish Bulls to be sold by G. N. wholesale and retail, at eighteen pence a piece."—An old

M A Y. Fifth Month, 1796.

She finds in Winter many a scene to please,
The morning's landscape, fringed with work gay;
The sun at noon seen thro' the leafless trees,
The clear calm æther at the close of day.
She marks the advantage storms and clouds bestow,
When bluff'ring Comus purifies the air,
When moist Aquarius pours the fleecy snow,
That makes th' impregnate globe a richer harvest bear.

Scotchman, residing at some distance up Hudson river, seeing this advertisement, and concluding, from their price, that the Bulls were in a manner going a begging, and mistaking them for cattle, instantly sold off several of his effects at vendue, to raise cash, and coming to town with the money, proceeded without loss of time to Mr. Noel's, Book-store, and demanded a sight of the Bulls. The Bookseller having some choice company that night to supper, and not caring to be disturbed after shop hours, desired the man to call next morning as early as he pleased and he should be supplied with any quantity at the price specified in the advertisement. The Scotchman having returned to a paltry inn where he meant to lodge, and telling the inn-keeper the business he had come upon, the host at once seeing his mistake, observed, that "these creatures would never suit him, as they were all Popish Bulls" Troith (said Hugh) I dinna care a baubee what their religion is, so that they will gang in the plough, and trail after them the mickle Dung-Cart!"

FRIENDSHIP.

WHEN Damon was sentenced by Dionysius of Syracuse to die on a certain day, he begged permission, in the interim to retire to his own country, to set the affairs of his disconsolate family in order. The tyrant intended peremptorily to refuse, by granting it, as he supposed, on the impossible conditions of his procuring some one to remain as hostage for his return, under equal forfeiture of life.—PYTHIAS heard the condition, and did not wait

GREAT God! did pious Abram pray
For Sodom's vile abandon'd race?
And shall not all our soul's be'rous'd
For Europe to implore thy grace?
Base as we are, does not thine eye
Its chosen thousands here survey;
Whose souls, deep humbled, mourn the crouds,

for an application on the part of Damon; he instantly offered himself as security for his friend, which, being accepted, Damon was immediately set at liberty.—The king and all the courtiers were astonished at this action; and therefore, when the day of execution drew near his majesty had the curiosity to visit Pythias in his confinement. After some conversation on the subject of friendship, in which the tyrant delivered it as his opinion, that self-interest was the sole mover of human actions; as for virtue, friendship, benevolence, love of one's country, and the like, he looked upon them as terms invented by the wise to keep in awe and impose upon the weak. "My Lord, said Pythias, with a firm voice and noble aspect, I would if it were possible, that I might suffer a thousand deaths, rather than my friend should fail in any article of his honour. He cannot fail therein, my lord, I am as confident of his virtue, as I am of my own existence. But I pray, I beseech the gods, to preserve the life and integrity of my Damon together; oppose him, ye winds, prevent the eagerness and impatience of his honourable endeavours, and suffer him not to arrive, till by my death I have redeemed a life a thousand times of more consequence, of more value than my own; more estimable to his lovely wife, to his precious little innocents, to his friends, to his country.—O leave me not to die the worst of death in my Damon."—Dionysius was awed and confounded by the dignity of these sentiments, and by the manner in which they were uttered; he felt his heart struck by a slight sense of invading truth; but it served rather to perplex than undeceive him.

Who walk in sin's destructive way?
O Judge supreme, let not thy sword
The righteous with the wicked smite:
Nor bury in promiscuous heaps
Rebels, and saints thy chief delight.
For these thy children spare the land;
Avert the thunders big with death;

The fatal day arrived, Pythias was brought forth, and walked amidst the guards, with a serious, but satisfied air, to the place of execution. Dyonisius was already there; he was exalted on a moving throne, and was drawn by six white horses, and sat pensive and attentive to the prisoner. Pythias came, he vaulted lightly on the scaffold, and beholding for some time the apparatus of his death, he turned with a placid countenance, and addressed the spectators:—"My prayers are heard," he cried, the gods are propicious: you know, my friends, that the winds have been contrary till yesterday, Damon could not come——he could not conquer impossibilities; he will be here to-morrow, and the blood which is shed to-day, shall have ransome the life of my friend. O could I erase from your bosoms every doubt, every mean suspicion, of the honour of the man, for whom I am about to suffer, I shall go to my death even as well as I would to my bridal. Be sufficient, in the mean time, that my friend will be found noble, that his truth is unimpeachable, that he will speedily prove it, that he is now on his way, hurrying on, accusing himself, the adverse elements, and the gods; but I haste to prevent his speed; executioner to your office." As he pronounced these last words, a buz began to rise among the remotest of the people; a distant voice was heard, the crowd caught the words, and stop, stop the execution, was repeated by the whole assembly; a man came at full speed; the throng gave way to his approach; he was mounted on a steed of foam; in an instant, he was off his horse, on the scaffold, and held Pythias straitly embraced.

Nor let the feeds of latent fire
Be kindled by thy flaming breath.
O! be not angry, mighty God,
While duft and aſhes ſeek thy face;
But gently bending from thy throne,
Renew, and ſtill increaſe thy grace.
Jeſus the interceſſor hear,

"You are safe," he cried, "you are safe, my friend, my beloved friend, the gods be praised, you are safe. I have now nothing but death to suffer, and I am delivered from the anguish of these reproaches which I gave myself, for having endangered a life so much dearer than my own." Pale, cold, and half speechless in the arms of his Damon, Pythias replied in broken accents—"Fatal haste! Cruel impatience! What envious powers have wrought impossibilities in your favour!—— But I will not be wholly disappointed. Since I cannot die to save you, I will not survive you."—Dyonisius heard, beheld, and considered all with astonishment.—His heart was touched, he wept, and leaving his throne, he ascended the scaffold, "Live, live, ye incomparable pair!" he cried, "ye have borne unquestionable testimony to the existence of virtue; and that virtue equally evinces a God to reward it. Live happy, live renowned! and, O, form me by your precepts, as ye have invited me by your example, to be worthy of the participation of so sacred a friendship."

lady by the ear, than she feels an impulse upon her heart, which directs her to the play-house, opera, Vauxhall, Sadler's Wells, or elsewhere; but very seldom to church. If at any time, for the sake of company, she takes her pleasure at church, the great deceiver keeps such a gingling of the chain in her ear, that she cannot attend to one word of the service; by these means the park, the mall, the play-house, and the church, are in effect the same thing to many ladies of fashion.

IMP. And are all who wear rings in their ears, to be looked upon as slaves to the great Belzebub, uncle?

FAST. No, Impiator, not all, for the invincible Immanuel hath broken the chains and loosed the bands of servitude from many, nevertheless, they still wear the rings in their ears to testify what they have been.

INCREASE OF CHRISTIANITY.

It is said four hundred waggons will scarcely contain the moveables of the Elector of Cologne (who is a Bishop) whilst a common pedlar's pack would have contained all the property of the whole Twelve Apostles!

Far from our gentle shepherd's arm;
Nor will these fatal wand'rings cease,
Till thou reveal the paths of peace.
O seek thy thoughtless servants, Lord,
Nor let us quite forget thy word;
Our erring souls do thou restore,
And keep us, that we stray no more.

ANECDOTE.

A certain divine about to change his congregation, mentioned that ſubject from the pulpit. After ſervice was over, an old negro man, belonging to the congregation, and who was one of his admirers, went up to him and deſired to know the motive of his leaving his firſt flock: the parſon anſwered, "he had a call." "I maſſa, returned the negro, who call you?" "God Almighty," anſwered the parſon. "I maſſa, he call you?" "Yes, Jack, he called me;" "Maſſa, what you get here?" "I get here 200l." "And what you get toder place?" "Why I am to get, 400l." "I maſſa, God Almighty call you till he be blind from 400l. to 200l, you no go."

Cure for the Flux.

Take one ounce of good Manna, one half ounce of Glauber ſalts, one quarter ounce Seanae, and four drachms fennel ſeed—put them into a tea-pot with three half pints of boiling water—let it be put on the fire 30 minutes,—take one third of it every half hour.—The patient muſt not eat any beef, or fiſh, nor drink any ſpirits for ſome days.

For the Ear-ach—The ſmoak of tobacco blown into the ear is excellent.

ON PARTIES.

BOTH make the public good their plea,
The end of all their wishes;
With half an eye a man may see,
Both want the loaves and fishes.

The following are the rates of Poſtage of Letters, eſtabliſhed by law.

	Cents.
For the poſtage of any letter not exceeding 30 miles,	6
Over 30 and not exceeding 60	8
Over 60 and not exceeding 100,	10½
Over 100 and not exceeding 150,	12
Over 150 and not exceeding 200,	15
Over 200 and not exceeding 250,	17
Over 250 and not exceeding 350,	20
Over 350 and not exceeding 450,	22
And from every place more than 450,	25

Every double letter pays double the laid rate. Every triple letter, and every packet weighing one ounce, avoirdupois, pays at the rate of four ſingle letters for each ounce, and in that proportion for every greater weight.

Poſtage of letters coming by ſea in packets or veſſels the poperty of the United States, either from one port to another or to and from the United States.

	Cents.
For a ſingle letter,	8
For a double letter,	16
For every triple letter or packet,	Cts. 24
For every letter or packet brought into the United States, or carried from one to another therein, by ſea, in any private ſhip or veſſel.	4

Spoken Extempore to a Lady, on being aſked what this World was like.

THIS world is a priſon in ev'ry reſpect,
Whoſe walls are the heavens in common;
The goaler is ſin, and the priſoners men,
And the fetters are nothing but—women.

Cure for the DROPSY.

TAKE a fix quart jug of old hard cyder, put therein a pint of muſtard-ſeed, one double handful of parſley-roots, one double handful of liguum vitæ ſhaving, and one double handful of horſe raddiſh roots; let them ſimper together over a ſlow fire forty-eight hours, when it will be fit for uſe. Take a tea cup full of this liquor three times a day, and it will work off the diſorder by urine, without any trouble to the patient.

A ſafe and effectual Cure for a freſh Cold.

IF the patient is coſtive he ſhould take a doſe of ſalts—If this is not the caſe let him bathe his feet at bed-time in a tub of water moderately warm, covering the tub with a blanket—then drink plentifully of weak balm or ſage tea juſt milk warm and ſweetened—The tea will be better if a lime or lemon is squeezed into it, or a little vinegar—let him live upon veal or chicken broth for a few days.—If the cold does not yield to this treatment, and the patient is young and ſtrong, he ſhould be bled; if a cough comes on, he ſhould drink often of ſweetened flaxſeed tea or barley water, with lime-juice or vinegar in it.—If theſe rules were obſerved, moſt people would ſoon get rid of their colds without the help of a phyſician, eſpecially if they would keep at home for a few days.

An excellent remedy for a Sprain.

KEEP the part as ſtill as poſſible, and waſh it often in the day with the ſtrongeſt vinegar—at night apply a poultice made of ſuch vinegar and bran.—This will cure any common ſprain.

To make Children cut their Teeth eaſy.

RUB the gums often in the day with a ſoft rag dipped in honey, and rolled round the finger.

To ſtop a Spitting of Blood.

SWALLOW a table ſpoonful of common ſalt, and repeat it every day, while the diſcharge of blood continues. Afterwards loſe a little blood from the arm, if the pulſe be full or hard, and live upon a milk and vegetable diet. When the pulſe becomes ſoft and weak, uſe animal food moderately, and drink occaſionally and temperately of wine and malt liquors.

In a mind where the principles of religion and integrity are firmly eſtabliſhed, ſenſibility is not merely the ally of weakneſs, or the ſlave of guilt, but ſerves to give a ſtronger impulſe to virtue.

Virtue is the only true ſupport of pleaſure; which, when diſjoined from it, is like a plant when its fibres are cut, which may ſtill look gay and lovely for a while, but ſoon decays and periſhes.

An effectual Cure for the Ague.

TAKE of beſt red bark two ounces, one ounce ſnake-root, one quart port wine, and a pint Coniac brandy, mix the whole together, ſimper them over a ſlow fire for about twenty minutes—then ſtrain the liquor, put it into a bottle, corking it cloſe; after cleanſing the ſtomach well with a vomit of ipecacuana, take a wine glaſs of the mixture every two hou the whole is finiſhed. Let the patient be careful to keep re, till while taking the medicine, warm

CURE FOR THE DROPSY.

TAKE one ounce of ſalt-petre, and diſſolve it in a pint of cold water, of which take a wine glaſs full every morning and evening. About five or ſix ounces, uſed in this manner, will generally perfect a cure.

N. B. The Use of this Table, as by Example will appear, viz. against 30*l* you'll find the Interest for a Week to be 9*d.* for a Month, 3*s.* for 3 Months, 6*s.* for 6 Months, 18*s.* for a Year, 1*l.* 16*s.*

Of extracting the Juice from the Sugar Maple.

A Gentleman who has visited Asia, suggests to his fellow citizens, that it may be more advantageous to them to make the incision higher than they do at present, for the Asiatics always cut the Palmira tree just below the first branches, and of the liquor they make both sugar and an intoxicating drink. If the saccharine juice is formed by the combination of the particular property of the maple tree, with the water which rises from the earth; it is natural to suppose that the present method of collecting the sap just above the ground, before it has undergone much commixture, will be attended with its present result viz, a great quantity of water, and very little syrup,—If upon experiment it shall be found that more sugar is made from a less quantity of sap when the incision is made high up, one great advantage will be, that less labour will be required to collect the sap, and to evaporate the water,

A method to prevent the Canker Worms, from destroying the Apple Trees.

AS soon as the snow goes off, and the frost is round the roots of the trees, take coarse running sand, lay it round the roots of the trees, about ten or twelve inches high, as steep as you can make it lie, and the bugs cannot crawl up, but will roll down, from time to time, until they are worried out, and will gather in heaps round the sands at the roots of the trees. If your orchard be near the barn, your fowls will be out early in the morning and will pick them up. If there comes a rain, or high winds, you must right the sands up again. Attend it well; and there will not one in a hundred will get up. Take a lanthern, and go about dusk, and you will be satisfied whether it will answer.
